An increasing awareness about preventive healthcare and health management, a growing population, an ageing population, as well as a more affluent population are some factors that would support the demand for quality healthcare services in Singapore. As Singapore continues to remain on the forefront in the research for new medical technologies, coupled with the nation’s reputation as a regional medical hub that provides very high quality healthcare services, AsiaMedic is in a good position to benefit from such trends.

Given its current capabilities and the positive trends, the Group aims to expand its businesses and widen its reach. It remains on the lookout for strategic opportunities to enhance its service offerings to bring even better, more complete quality healthcare services to patients.
